Interjections

HEY! ARE YOU READING THIS? OH, YOU ARE READING THIS. GREAT! NOW YOU CAN LEARN ABOUT INTERJECTIONS.

Interjections are words used to express a strong feeling or a sudden emotion, and are usually included at the beginning of a sentence. They are used to express surprise, joy, disgust, excitement, enthusiasm or many other emotions. Three interjections are shown in the sentence in the bubble above.

You have probably used interjections when talking (or yelling) to your friends or family. Now you know what those words are called. See the table below for the types of interjections and how they are used.

How Interjections are Used	Example
1. They are used to introduce a sentence. Please is an introductory word.	➔ Please, will you help me with the work.
2. They are not dependent on any words contained in the sentence that follows it. In the example, "Ouch!" stands alone, "I" is the subject , and "hit" is the action of the subject.	➔ Ouch! I hit my thumb with the hammer.
3. Introductory words such as yes, no, well, and indeed are identified as interjections.	➔ Yes, I will be at the party. No, I do not know the answer.
4. If the interjection is followed by an exclamation point (!) it shows a strong emotion.	➔ Help! There is an emergency at my house.
5. If the interjection is followed by a comma, it is not showing a strong emotion.	➔ Uh oh, I think I forgot to finish my homework.
6. Interjections may contain more than one word.	➔ Holy cow! Did you see the size of that wave?
7. Interjections sometimes can be found in the middle or end of a sentence separated by a comma.	➔ I think I will, um, try to answer the question.

For more information about them, take a look at this list of common adjectives. Interjections are rarely, if ever, used in business or academic writing where the tone should be formal. An interjection is one of the eight main parts of speech, along with verbs, nouns, pronouns, adjectives, adverbs, prepositions, and conjunctions. Like many other elements of the English language, interjections are meant to be used in moderation. Several of the options may fit in more than one sentence. The following interjection worksheet is available as a downloadable and printable PDF document. Onomatopoeia is a word that mimics a sound, such as "woot", "doh" or "boo". These types of words are found in all languages; however, the same sound in different languages will follow the patterns of that language.
